

In this seminar I briefly discuss where and how geometry appears in modern physics, why it become important to go beyond (pseudo)Riemannian geometry and discuss some different approaches to noncommutative geometry taken by physicists, and in particular through spaces defined with noncommuting coordinate operators.