

Title: The quest for electron-hole superfluidity

Electron-hole superfluidity promises high transition temperatures because the pairing interaction is Coulomb and strong. I will survey recent attempts to observe this phenomenon in both semiconductor and graphene based heterostructures. I will review the theoretical issues involved and identify promising possibilities.