

Abstract

Recently, sterile neutrinos as dark matter candidate have received new attention. The SNAC (Sterile Neutrinos in Astrophysics and Cosmology) conference which was held 25-29 March had been devoted to different aspects of this hypothesis. In this seminar we will review the main topics discussed in this conference. The presentations given at this conference are available at <http://snac.epfl.ch/program.html>.