

Abstract

I will discuss at very elementary level the robust model independent predictions of inflation and compare these predictions with the results the observations of the fluctuations of the cosmic microwave background radiation.